Summary: Two years of the pandemic and other changes in my life over that time have made me realize something. Despite being incredibly passionate for music, and the teaching of music, it's no longer keeping me where I'd like to be financially. Deciding to switch has been an incredibly difficult decision, but a necessary one I feel.

I've been educating myself in the field of project management this past year, but that career path is not set in stone. I am open to other fields and opportunities that have the potential to help me fulfill my personal and financial goals in my life. I'm open to sales positions, account management positions, really anything in which the soft-skills I have acquired would help me excel.

Work Experience:

Freelance Musician, October 2012-Present: Private lesson and master class instructor for multiple school districts throughout the Dallas/Ft. Worth metroplex. Responsibilities included, contacting parents of potential students, schedule and teach the lessons, collect monthly payments from each parent.
